

OTAGO DAPHNE PURVES AWARDS APPLICATION PACK

Otago Daphne Purves Awards were established to celebrate the life of Dame Daphne Purves (1908-2008). Members of the Otago Branch of NZFGW or Independent members of NZFGW resident in Southland can apply.

Applications close each year on 15 February and 15 July.

Read all the material supplied in this Application Pack so that you are conversant with both the ethos and the procedures associated with Otago Daphne Purves Awards. If you decide to apply for this Award, allow yourself plenty of time to assemble material and complete your application.

Submit each page of your application on a separate sheet of A4 paper. The sheets should not be bound or stapled, to allow for photocopying. Sign or initial each sheet of paper submitted.

The following items are included in this Application Pack.

- Introductory page (this page).
- Notes about Dame Daphne Purves for whom the Awards are named (1 page).
- Otago Daphne Purves Awards Description and Criteria for Eligibility (2 pages).
- The prescribed form for Otago Daphne Purves Award Application (4 pages).
- Who can apply for an Otago Daphne Purves Award? (1 page).
- Guidelines for making an Otago Daphne Purves Award application (1 page).

Notes about Dame Daphne Purves for whom the Awards are named

Daphne Helen Purves, D.B.E., M.A.

Daphne was born in Dunedin on 8th November 1908 as the eldest child of Irvine Watson Cowie and Helen Cowie (nee Crawford). Both parents had a high regard for education. Daphne attended Anderson's Bay Primary School and Otago Girls' High School and studied at Otago University from 1927 to 1930 graduating in 1931 with 1st class Honours in English and French.

Admired and respected as a teacher all her life, she first taught at Waitaki and Otago Girls' High Schools. In 1939 she married Herbert Dudley ("Dick") Purves, an endocrinologist at the Otago Medical School who was destined to have an illustrious career in medical research, achieving international recognition and the award of an honorary degree from the University of Otago and a C.M.G. The birth of children (Hilary in 1941, Elizabeth in 1943 and Robert in 1947) brought Daphne's teaching career to a temporary close but she became active in broadcasting and the Otago Branch of the Federation of University Women (becoming President in 1951) and was able to return to teaching in 1957 as the only woman staff member at Otago Boys' High School. This was followed by three years as an advisor to university students on Department of Education bursaries and in 1966 she was appointed senior lecturer in French at Dunedin Teachers' College where she set up and headed the first language department until her retirement in 1973.

In 1962 she became President of the NZFUW and in 1965 commenced her involvement with the IFUW (International Federation of University Women, now GWI, Graduate Women International), first as a member of its Cultural Relation Committee and then as its Convener. From there she moved onto the Board of the IFUW serving as 3rd and 1st Vice-Presidents (1971-1977) and finally becoming President in 1977, the first woman from the Southern Hemisphere to do so. Her work for the IFUW took her to some 40 different countries, attending conferences and encouraging and advising national Federations. She was an indefatigable traveller and a champion of the rights of women everywhere. At the same time she served on the New Zealand National Commission for UNESCO for 4 years from 1964 and on its sub-committee for education for a further 10 years. Wishing to be involved as well in a specifically New Zealand project she spent some years (1978-82) working for the New Zealand National Commission for the Year of the Child. In 1979 her achievements were crowned by the award of Dame Commander of the British Empire. The award specified "for services to the community" but it is certain that being President of the IFUW played a major role.

In her retirement from public life, Daphne dedicated her energies to her family, to playing bridge and croquet (becoming an umpire) and attending University Extension classes. She retained her love of travelling well into her nineties and attended an IFUW Conference in Graz in 1998.

She died on October 15th 2008, a few weeks short of her hundredth birthday.

These notes were written for our Application Pack by Dame Daphne's daughter, Hilary Purves. We thank Hilary and her sister Elizabeth and brother Robert for the support they gave the Branch as it established the Otago Daphne Purves Awards.

OTAGO DAPHNE PURVES AWARDS: DESCRIPTION AND CRITERIA FOR ELIGIBILITY

Otago Daphne Purves Awards celebrate Dame Daphne Purves (1908-2008). Dame Daphne was President of IFUW (International Federation of University Women; now GWI, Graduate Women International) from 1977-1980. She was a member of NZFGW (Otago Branch) and valued education for girls and women.

The Awards were established by NZFGW (Otago Branch) in 2009 to celebrate Dame Daphne's life by acknowledging contributions of experience and research made by women who, in their personal or professional practice, also support NZFGW and GWI goals.

Up to four Otago Daphne Purves Awards may be made each year to NZFGW Otago Branch members or Independent members of NZFGW resident in Southland regardless of their age, career prospects, or occupation. They are offered to enable women to participate in conferences, meetings, courses, workshops or events, in New Zealand or overseas, to contribute material from their experience or research and to gain expertise, ideas or professional development that will benefit their communities of interest.

Application for an Otago Daphne Purves Award may be made several times in a member's life. While NZFGW (Otago Branch) will wish to exercise discretion and fairness in granting subsequent awards, it may choose to respond to events, societal or personal, that have affected a candidate's circumstances. Examples include limited opportunities for promotion; limited opportunities for employer support; outcomes of decisions about additional commitments in caring situations; acceptance of changes in career, employment, social relationships, or income.

Preference is given to women who do not have easy access to other sources of funding and who have an income insufficient to support such activities. Each award is a maximum of $4000.

1. The closing dates for applications are 15 February and 15 July.
2. Applicants must be fully paid up financial members of either the Otago Branch of NZFGW or Independent members of NZFGW resident in Southland for at least the six months immediately prior to the relevant application closing date.
3. Awards are available only to current residents of Otago or Southland.
4. Awards cannot be granted retrospectively.

5. Recipients of a Travel Award, or of an Otago Daphne Purves Award, or of an Otago Branch or national NZFGW or IFUW or GWI award with a value greater than $1000 will not be eligible to apply for a first or subsequent Otago Daphne Purves Award for at least four years after accepting the previous award.
6. No awards will be made if there are no suitable applicants. This Award is not available for Ph.D. or Masters candidates.
7. Applicants must apply on the prescribed application form (currently dated April, 2015) to which no changes may be made in formatting or length. If additional material is appended to the Application it must not exceed, in length or content, the limits set in the Guidelines for making an Otago Daphne Purves Award application (currently dated April, 2015). If these requirements are disregarded the application will be considered invalid.
8. Information supplied by the applicant and obtained from referees will be confidential to this Award's Selection Panel except as agreed in the Privacy Statement submitted with the Application and signed by the applicant.
9. Notification may take up to eight weeks after closing date.
10. Awards will not be paid out until evidence of the planned project has been received, namely, a copy of travel tickets and copies of acceptance of event registration(s) and formal contribution(s), and/or copies of other receipts relevant to the project.
11. Award recipients are required to submit a 200-300 word Report within a month of the completion of their project, and to be willing to speak about it publicly if requested.
12. Awards are made by the Branch Committee on recommendations received from this Award's Selection Panel. Branch Committee decisions are final. If further correspondence and/or communications are received they will be circulated to all members of the Selection Panel and the relevant subcommittees of the Branch Committee, and brought to the attention of the Branch Committee.

Who can apply for an Otago Daphne Purves Award?

Otago Daphne Purves Awards were created to encourage members to do something special. Project ideas of the Branch members who established the Awards included: volunteering at a charitable site; following up less career-focussed aspects of one's research or interests; upgrading qualifications after time out of a profession; self-publishing a book written at home; finding personal refreshment; establishing collaborative links with colleagues; undertaking an optional course of study. Nancy Tayles was granted an Award in 2013 and here is her report on her project.

Report on Otago Daphne Purves Award, 2013

The grant I received enabled me to achieve my aims, the first of which was to attend a South East Asian regional archaeology conference in Thailand in May 2013. This was a conference organised by Southeast Asians primarily for Southeast Asians and so was a valuable opportunity to interact with local archaeologists in a relatively informal setting compared with larger conferences organised by international associations dominated by 'western' archaeologists. I was particularly pleased to be invited to present a workshop on bioarchaeology in Myanmar/Burma in 2014. My second aim was to visit the National University of Laos to organise a regional bioarchaeology conference. A main finding was that Laos is far more expensive than I had anticipated. Without access to adequate funding for such a conference, and realising the minimal understanding of bioarchaeology among Laos archaeology students, I modified my aims to presenting a workshop at the University to give their current cohort of senior undergraduates some basic grounding in the human osteology. The Otago NZFGW Committee had generously awarded me sufficient funding to allow for a second trip to Laos, which I ultimately undertook in February this year when I presented a workshop to a small but enthusiastic group of students, staff, and local archaeologists. I was generously assisted with this by an ex Master's student of mine, Stacey Ward, who was in Southeast Asia at the time. The workshop was very successful and most importantly has stimulated the University to consider further, extended workshops in the future.

Guidelines for making an Otago Daphne Purves Award application

Read our questions carefully and edit your responses to fit the spaces provided. No changes may be made to either the length or format of the Application form provided. Please note that the length of the spaces provided for answers are considered to be as much a part of the formatting as the questions, margins, etc. Do not write in the margins, as Applications must be suitable for photocopying.

If you cannot edit your response(s) to fit the space(s) given, you may append one extra page with up to 600 words, hand written or typed, describing your project, research, and/or relevant aspects of your situation. Note, though, that we much prefer to receive applications edited to fit the form. Submit each page of your Application on a separate sheet of A4 paper, each signed or initialed. Secure the pages with a clip, rather than with binding or staple, to allow for photocopying.

If the prescribed form is changed and/or more than one extra page is appended your application will be considered invalid.

The following notes may help you assemble, edit and report your responses to the questions we ask.

Responses to the questions on the first page of the application form

We are interested in applicants' circumstances because our support is based on notions of charity rather than on notions of reward. Thus, women who cannot access funding from other sources and/or have a lower personal income and/or have little discretion in spending their income may be given preference over those who have, or have had, significant opportunities for support.

Be unabashed and straightforward in answering. Note that we require responses about finances to be given in New Zealand dollars rather than by description only. If you think a response may raise queries, describe any extenuating circumstances. For example, it would be useful for the Selection Panel to know if you live on a fixed income (Superannuation, tertiary education allowance, benefit, etc.) that is unlikely to change significantly in the future, or to know if a parent or a child of any age who suffers from a disability will need additional emotional and financial support in your absence.

Responses to the questions on the second page of the application form

Describe your project's purpose, structure, proposed visits and anticipated outcomes as succinctly as you can. Back this up by ensuring that your referees understand your intentions and plans.

Responses to the questions on the third page of the application form

When listing known and estimated expenses focus on travel, accommodation, registration(s), and items specific to your project. If travel is not a major contributor to your project's expenses, give information that explains and justifies the expenses you list. Incidentals including food, insurance, conference dinners, etc., should not be included in your total costs as they will not be taken into account by the Selection Panel. In decision-making about travel, the Selection Panel will take into account the lowest known current fare to your destination(s).

Note that most people who agree to be referees will be glad to receive a copy of the Description and Eligibility Criteria and the Application form for awards for which they are named as referees.

Responses to the requests on the fourth page of the application form

Remember to sign and date as indicated to show that you have read and understood the Privacy Statement and to sign and date again to show that you have read and understood the NZFGW (Otago Branch) Otago Daphne Purves Awards Description and Criteria for Eligibility and all other information in the Otago Daphne Purves Awards Application Pack (currently dated April, 2015).
